Dr. Michelle Williams-Alden, LPC, is passionate about bringing healing and hope to our nation's most vulnerable children who have been traumatized by abuse, neglect or abandonment. Dr. Williams-Alden has a big heart for kids, especially those who are struggling or often misunderstood. Once a foster child, she understands first-hand, attachment related trauma and childhood abuse. She was adopted at 6 years old and then after forty years, reunited with her biological siblings and mother. She believes that a child's family is key in restoring hope and safety and resolving past hurts and disappointments. She has spent years studying best practices for children and trauma, learning about the incredible healing power of the brain, and working in the trenches with families in crisis. From this great wealth of information, she has developed the Healthy Foundations Family Program (HFFP)--an intensive in-home program that is available to individual families and agencies in Idaho and eventually across the US.
